

WHAT SHE WANTED....AND

...WHAT HE GOT!

PHILADELPHIA CORPORATION WILL BUILD SHELBYVILLE LINE.

L. G. Smith, vice president of the Shelbyville & Frankfort Realty Company, has received a letter from P. C. Phillips, of Philadelphia, advising he had succeeded in completing the organization of a corporation to construct the Shelbyville-Frankfort interurban line under the terms of the contract executed several days ago by him with the members of the realty company.

Under the contract entered into between Mr. Phillips and the Shelbyville & Frankfort Realty Company, work of the actual construction of the line is to begin by not later than March 1, 1918, and must be fully completed, equipped and in operation by January 1, 1920. Mr. Phillips stated he would return next week to close the final plans.

When completed the new interurban line will parallel the State pike midway between the Louisville & Nashville Railway Company tracks and the right of way of the Louisville Southern Railway Company. The new traction line will connect at Shelbyville with the Louisville & Interurban Company and at Frankfort with the Bluegrass Traction Company.

THE MOTIVE POWER.

What is it keeps us at our toil and makes us dig and strain and mull, work hard by day and think at night of things undone or not done right? What is it holds us in the mill, and grinds and grinds on us until we're cracked and broke and crushed up fine? Why, it's those kids of yours and mine.

Why is it that we wear old shoes, and eat coarse grub, and have the blues when we see rainy days ahead? Why is it that for things we've said or done we fret and grieve; and then resolve that we'll be better men, restrain our tempers, cease to cuss, and have the world look up to us? Why it's because two kids, or three, are fastened on to you and me.

Who is it gives us strength to strive, and makes us glad that we're alive, and when we fail inspires us then to set ourselves and cry again? Who is it keeps us young at heart and makes us feel ourselves a part of all life's hopes and joys, and brings us dreams of better days and things? Who still, when skies grow dark above, by word or look of faith or love, can flood our souls with bright sunshine? Why, those same kids of yours and mine.—E. E. Miller, in Southern Agriculturist.

LOOKING BACKWARD. (Hopkinsville New Era)

When Judge Bill Yost was here the other day somebody recalled an amusing incident of the examining trial in the noted Coffee murder case, in which the Madisonville attorney figured as one of the lawyers for the defense.

A large number of striking miners had been haled before the court, and Judge Polk Caniser was presiding.

After the evidence was in, the defense insisted on peremptory instructions.

"No," said his honor, "I think I'll just hold 'em all over."

Judge Yost sprang to his feet. "I demand," he shouted, "to know the charge. What possible legal reason have you, sir, to deprive these men of their liberty?"

"Well, as accessories to general running around," explained Judge Caniser.

"Great God!" ejaculated the lawyer, glowering down on the bench from his giant height. "What chance, then, would a hound dog have in this jurisdiction?"

Sentry, in Bold Silhouette Against Darkening Sky, Stands Guard at Camp

When the shadows of night creep over the hills, the soldier begins to feel the inspiring responsibility of his duty. Darkness brings its own dangers, and the "All's Well" of the sentry has deeper meaning. This striking picture snapped at nightfall shows an outpost at encampment "somewhere in the United States." He is patrolling near a company street, where the soldiers are preparing for "taps" and "lights out." The scene is typical of many camps at this time. The picture has been censored and passed by the Committee on Public Information.
